Buying agency Property Vision has expanded its London-based team, hiring Matthew Page as an executive.

The former Knight Frank associate partner has had a dual life for the last 27 years, running a successful music management business and working as an independent selling agent, with a focus on high-value off-market transactions across all sectors. A chartered surveyor, Page has collaborated with Property Vision on several deals over the years, involving both super-prime resi and West End offices.

The agency, which was founded in 1983, said the hire would “further reinforce its ability to focus on a client’s core real estate needs, regardless of specific market sector”.

Matthew Page: “I have seen Property Vision in action for a number of years and have always enjoyed my interactions with their team. We share the same values. A 100% client focused service providing truly impartial advice. I am confident that my experience will complement and add value to this well-established brand.”

James Horgan, Head of Commercial: “Matthew’s ability to unlock prime properties, often off-market, will be hugely valuable to our clients looking to acquire some of London’s best buildings. We very much look forward to welcoming him into our team.”
